

Web Consultation

Contributed by Alan
Tuesday, 08 July 2008
Last Updated Tuesday, 08 July 2008

For those who know little about websites I offer a consultation. If you aren't really sure what you want with your website, or you want to know what your ideas will entail and cost, whether they're feasible on your budget or there is an alternative, this consultation could help you out and save you a lot of time. It will include:

- An interview to determine what exactly you want your website to do, what your budget is, and what your best course of action will be.
- Introduction to having a web page (with questions welcome along the way)
- Explanation of the technical terms you're likely to encounter that can be intimidating.
- Explanation of the programs that having a website, or the website you want requires.
- Discussion of whether you may want to make and manage your site yourself and what that would entail.
- List of the types of materials that go into a website that either you or I need to locate or create.
- A conversation to determine whether we would like to work together or with what type of person or company you would like to work. As part of the consultation, I will find the perfect person or business for you.